Ruth Owen : Valentine's Day Origami (Holiday Origami (Powerkids)) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Valentine's Day Origami (Holiday Origami (Powerkids)):

Readers can celebrate the sweetest of holidays in a new and exciting way. Using just a sheet of paper, they'll learn to create hearts, roses, and even boxes to store all of their valentines. Easy-to-follow instructions give readers a new way to express how much they care for others.

From School Library Journal Gr 3-6-Even novice folders will be able to create some of the simple projects in these volumes, although more-experienced enthusiasts will find little in the way of challenges. The abundant photos, which illustrate the instructions, are more useful than the texts, which can get pretty cryptic on more complicated projects-a common problem in the abstract, relational world of paper-folding. These are solid sources for some basic objects: heart, egg, small basket, star, pinwheel, etc. Introductory pages outline tips for success and offer inspiration in the form of pictures of advanced origami by master folders. From Booklist Far from generic greeting cards and predesigned e-messages, this inviting title in the Holiday Origami series encourages young people to create an original I-love-you offering. The clear step-by-step instructions are illustrated with bright color photos and diagrams on every well-designed double-page spread. After a brief history of the origin and traditions of Valentines Day, the origami instructions start off simply, with pictures and directions on exactly how and when to fold and crease. First, there are two spreads with 9 steps that show how to make an origami heart. Later, 13 steps over four pages show how to make a red rose. Nine steps make a heart box. The joy of creating and giving friendship bracelets is a great climax. Back matter includes a glossary and a list of suggested websites. Other titles in the series focus on origami for Easter, Halloween, and Thanksgiving. Fun for sharing at home and school. Grades 3-6. --Hazel Rochman
